Chicken on the Roof. Poetry, profundity and high comedy combine in this brilliant book of sparkling poems from Matt Goodfellow. The absurdity of chickens stuck on rooftops, hedgehogs wincing through the backstroke, talking baked bean tins, a cat relieving itself in a grandparent's beard, reflections on loss, the passage of time, the importance of place, and the grandeur of nature all happily cohabit here, forming a collection which can raise a loud laugh or prompt a quiet tear.

Adequate ventilation is one of the most important features of any chicken coop. Chickens have especially sensitive respiratory systems, so airflow is key. That's why our Gambrel Roof chicken coop contains windows in the gable ends, front and rear, for cross-ventilation, plus an adjustable ventilation slot.

When you're adding ventilation, a good way to reduce air leaks is to put all of the ventilation up high - ideally above chicken level. Do this at the tops of the walls so that everything is protected from rain, wind, and snow. This will protect the coop as it will be sheltered by the roof overhangs but also allow in fresh air.
